

The adventurous princess and Temut the dragon

In a magical kingdom surrounded by enchanted forests and mist-covered mountains lived a princess called Alba. While other princesses preferred staying in the castle, brushing their hair and waiting for a charming prince, Alba longed for adventure and the excitement of the world outside.

One day, while exploring the thick forest around the castle, she reached a clearing with a hidden cave. Filled with curiosity, she went inside and discovered a large dragon called Temut. With his bright pink wings and eyes as big as full moons, he looked nothing like the terrifying beast everyone in the kingdom feared.

Despite his imposing size, Alba immediately sensed the sadness surrounding him. Temut explained that he had lived alone for years, rejected by the kingdom’s other creatures because of his frightening appearance. Whatever people said about him, he was a lonely, timid soul who longed for company.

Without hesitation, Alba promised to help him overcome his fears and show the world that he was worth knowing beyond his appearance. Together they set out on exciting adventures across the kingdom, uncovering ancient secrets and discovering magical places neither had seen before.

Their journey was not easy. Stories of fierce dragons spread throughout the kingdom, and people refused to believe that Temut was harmless. A wicked wizard, jealous of their friendship, also tried to turn them against one another with tricks and lies.

Despite these obstacles, Alba and Temut remained firm friends. In time, they earned the people’s respect and admiration through their strength, courage and understanding. At the great annual festival they finally appeared together, winning the villagers’ hearts with their friendship and showing that true beauty lies within.
